Place: Athabasca University
Governing Council Chambers

There are a lot of myths and misinformation about bats that has led to these special animals being given a negative reputation. In this workshop, you will learn fact from fiction! By the end of this workshop you will be able to appreciate the many beneficial, but often overlooked, ecological and economic services they do for us. This workshop will also go over how to attract bats to your yard by going over bat house designs and proper placement.

Lisa Card is the Conservation Coordinator for Highway 2 Conservation (H2C), a sustainable agriculture organization that partners with Athabasca County and the surrounding areas. She has her Bachelor of Science Degree in Conservation Biology and got her experience studying bats through an independent study funded by Grant MacEwan University. She is currently running the “Save a Barn, Save a Bat” program through H2C, who was the recent recipient of the Habitat Stewardship for Species at Risk funding from the Government of Canada.
